FORTUNE TO SAVE TREES

Wealthy Californians Are Spending Thousands in Fighting a New Blight.

San Francisco.—A considerable fortune is being spent by wealthy Californians in an effort to save groves on beautiful estates near this city from a blight that has recently attacked most of the trees. Tree surgeons are gathering here from various parts of the country and are working hard under offers of large rewards if they can stop the destruction. Should they fail, it is probable that foresters will be brought from Europe.

The blight is in the form of a fungus known as the volaria bacteria. After it has taken hold on a tree thousands of worms develop. They are much like the carpenter borer. These pierce the bark through and through, and sometimes make large holes. Their ravages were not detected until many of the fine shade trees wilted this season and were threatened with quick death. Tree authorities of Stanford university were called in and found that the blight extended among the estates in beautiful Menlo park. They also discovered that the disease was spreading rapidly to the north.

The Stanford scientists could not tell the source of the blight, and then the surgeons from the east were called in, among them G. H. Bishop, who was trained at the Yale School of Forestry. The only thing that has served to help the trees has been to remove the fungus when found, and plug the holes made by the borers with cement. In some instances as high as $500 has been spent to save a single tree, and the total expense will run high into the thousands.

One theory is that the germ of the fungus has been brought in from Asia, from which many trees have been imported to beautify the grounds of wealthy men. It is probable that investigators will be sent to Japan and China in an effort to trace the disease.

Pine forests throughout the north-west Pacific coast are also being devastated. A species of beetle lays its eggs in the bark of the tree. From them come grubs that grow inside the bark and feed on the tree until they become beetles which fly away to destroy other trees. Hundreds of infected pines have been cut down and state and government authorities are co-operating with lumbermen in an effort to wipe out the pest.

300 FIRES LAID TO BOY

Fire Bug Syndicate, Police Aver, Is Composed of Insurance Brokers and Adjusters.

New York.—Isidor Steinrutzer, an east side youth of diminutive stature, is under arrest charged by the fire marshal with being the head of a widely ramified "firebug syndicate" and of having started more than 300 fires in this city in the last five years. Isidor, when cornered by the marshal on a fire escape in 118th street, was smoking a cigarette and watching the panic and distress caused by a tenement house fire, in which the lives and property of eighty persons were in danger. He is charged with having started this fire in conspiracy with Samuel Gold, in whose flat the fire occurred, and who is also under arrest.

The firebug syndicate is said to be composed of a number of east side fire insurance brokers and adjusters, a few underworld characters and a swarm of "runners," whose vocation is to approach east side tenement dwellers who are poor and easily tempted into dishonesty, and whom the "runners" persuade to join in a swindle of the fire insurance companies by overinsuring their few pieces of furniture and allowing the "operatives" of the syndicate to set the furniture afire.

The average price charged for starting a fire is about $25. According to the fire commissioner, 25 per cent of the fires in New York city are of the incendiary origin.

WAS LIKE FLAG OF TRUCE?

Supposed Mad Dog Wags Its Tail at Policeman in Time to Save Its Life.

Kansas City, Mo.—The timely wag of his tail saved the life of a Scotch collie belonging to Rev. Father Sigismund Piron, pastor of St. Anthony's church, Seventh street and Barnett avenue, Kansas City, Kan.

A call was received at police headquarters that there was a mad dog at Sixth street and Barnett avenue, and Patrolman Otis Flora was dispatched with a riot gun to kill it. He found the dog with its tongue hanging out, hot, lost and excited.

"Here!" called Flora, to get the dog to turn its head to give him a better shot. But the dog advanced in a friendly manner and wagged his tail. "That dog's not mad," Flora said, and let down the hammer of the gun. "He's only hot and lost."

Just then some children came along who said that the dog belonged to Father Piron. The policeman led it home.

Crazed by Moth in Ear.

Lasalle, Colo.—Henry Nick, a farmer, was brought into the office of a physician and an investigation disclosed the fact there was a live moth in his ear. The pain had driven him frantic and it was necessary for three men to hold him while the doctor dislodged the animal and removed the insect, which was still fluttering its wings.
